Gentlemen:

I enclose a check made payable to my father, Mr. Chas. H. Lee, for Eighteen Dollars ($18.00). I have endorsed it, C. H. Lee per C. K. Lee and will be obliged if you will deposit it to the credit of my father's account. The amount is due for some rent on some property at Alvin and, although my father is dead, I presume there will be no objection on the part of any one to this endorsement. You can, if you see fit, attach this letter to the check when it goes back to the Alvin bank.

Truly yours,

AMERICAN CONGRESS. TUESDAY, DECEMBER 10.

THE hour having arrived which the President appointed, Mr. SPEAKER, attended by the members present, proceeded to the President's house to present him their address in answer to his speech on the opening of the present session; and having returned the President's reply thereto was read as follows:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives

THIS very respectful address from the representatives of the people of the United States, at their first assembly of the fresh election, under the strong impression of the public opinion and national sense, at this interesting and singular crisis of our public affairs, has excited my sensibility and receives my sincere and grateful acknowledgements.

As long as we can maintain with harmony and affection the honor of our country, consistently with its peace, externally and internally, while that is attainable, or in war, when that becomes necessary,—asserts its real independence and sovereignty, and support the constitutional energies and dignity of its government—we may be perfectly sure under the smiles of Divine Providence, that we shall effectually promote and extend our national interests and happiness.

The applause of the Senate and House of Representatives, so justly bestowed upon the volunteers and militia, for their zealous and active co-operation with the judicial power, which has restored order and submission to the laws, as it comes with peculiar weight from the Legislature, cannot fail to have an extensive and permanent effect, for the support of government upon all those ingenuous minds, who receive delight from the approving and animating voice of their country.

JOHN ADAMS.

United States,

Dec. 10,

and the
morrow morning, 11 o'clock.

Mr. Josiah Parker and Mr. Robert Page, from Virginia, appeared on Monday, were qualified and took their seats.

Mr. Speaker, on Monday laid before the House, a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, inclosing a statement of his accounts for the year '99. Ordered to lie on the table.

Messrs. Harper, Griswold, Otis, Galaham, Powell, John Brown, Stone, Nott and Platt, were appointed a standing committee of Ways and Means.

Messrs. Harper, C. Goodrich, Bayard, Marshall and Sewall, were appointed a committee, in pursuance of a resolution passed on Monday, relative to the revision

Knowing as we do, that the United States are sincerely anxious for a fair and liberal execution of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation entered into with Great Britain; we learn with regret, that the progress of adjustment has been interrupted by a difference of opinion among the commissioners. We hope, however, that the justice, the moderation, and the obvious interest of both parties will lead to satisfactory explanations; and that the business will then go forward to an amicable close of all the differences and demands between the two countries. We are fully persuaded that the Legislature of the United States will cheerfully enable you to realize your assurances of performing on our part, all engagements with punctuality and the most scrupulous good faith.

When we reflect upon the late uncertainty of the result of the late mission to France; and upon the uncommon nature, extent, and aspect of the war now raging in Europe; which affects materially our relations with the powers at war, and which has changed the condition of these colonies our neighborhood, we are of opinion with you, that it would be neither wise or safe to relax our measures of defence or to lessen any of our preparations to repel aggression.

Our enquiries and attention should be carefully directed to the various other important subjects which you have recommended to our consideration; and from our experience of your past administration we anticipate with the highest confidence your strenuous co-operation in all measures which have a tendency to promote and extend our national interest and happiness.

To which the President made the following REPLY.

Gentlemen of the Senate

I thank you for this address. I wish you all possible success and satisfaction in your deliberations on the means, which have a tendency to promote and extend our national interest and happiness. I assure you that in all our measures directed to those great objects you may at all times rely with the highest confidence on my cordial co-operation.

The praise of the Senate so judiciously conferred on the promptitude and zeal of the troops, called to suppress the insurrection, as it falls from so high authority, must make a deep impression, both as a terror to the disobedient and an encouragement to such as do well.

JOHN ADAMS.

United States,
Dec. 10, 1799.

exposed to the greatest personal danger under a heavy fire, being frequently in the front of the line, animating by his example the exertions of his troops, upon which on this and every other occasion where the British arms are brought into attack, it is impossible to bestow too much praise.

The Hamburg mail due on Sunday last arrived this morning. It brings accounts of the events which took place in Switzerland in the latter end of Sept. except only those which relate to Marshal Suwarrow of which we have no positive information. The Arch Duke, it appears, was rapidly advancing to repair the evils which had been occasioned by his absence. His force we know, by private letters, to consist of 26000 men, with which he was at Schaffhausen on the 2d. The army of Conde consisting of 6000 men was the same day at Stoaeh.

The forces joined to the Bavarians and to the corps of Gen. Korsakow, are it must be allowed, more than sufficient to secure that part of Germany from all danger. We rejoice at seeing the conjectures which we have from the first instance averred, respecting the probable consequences of the victory at Massena, thus confirmed.

The Hamburg mail which became due on Wednesday, had not arrived when this paper went to press.

Extract of a Dispatch from Lieutenant Colonel Ramsay to Lord Greenville, dated Head-Quarters Schaffhausen, September 30.

My Lord,

It is with extreme concern I inform your Lordship, that an attack has been made on the allied army, the result of which has been favorable to the enemy. The combined operations of the Allies, of which your Lordship is already informed, were intended to have taken place on the 26th and 27th; and six battalions of the army commanded by General Korsakoff, were detached to Uznach on the 27th, for the purpose of increasing the force destined to
